Reimagined 17th Century Palace

Palazzo Durazzo, Genoa, Italy

The unveiling of the restored Palazzo Durazzo marks a momentous occasion for the vibrant city of Genoa. Located in the ancient Old Town of this historic maritime hub, the 17th Century palace was created in 1624 by the Durazzo family to serve as an official guest house of the Genoese state. Four centuries later, the family has reimagined the building to its original use, creating a boutique hotel that stands as a testament to timeless elegance and refined luxury. Offering discerning travelers an unparalleled blend of historic charm and modern sophistication, the Palazzo invites guests to immerse themselves in the rich culture and heritage of Genoa while indulging in the comforts of luxurious accommodations. Twelve suites, each unique in design, have been created within the Palazzo, along with an impressive double-height lounge and a frescoed breakfast room offering views over the city's medieval harbor.
